

I am concerned that the FCC may implement a proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

Since I have signed up for the do-not-call list, our time at home has been much more peaceful and quiet and I have enjoyed spending quiet evenings with my family. If this were revoked and I started receiving calls from telemarketers again, I would find that very distressing. The phone ringing constantly, from as early as 8am, to as late as 9pm, on weekends and during dinner is extremely frustrating.

I pay over $40 a month for a phone service that receives more calls than I actually make - I don't like to spend time on the phone, especially with rude telemarketers who are trying to get me to buy something I can't afford. My phone line is my own and it's not fair that I should have to put up with these people calling and harrassing me!

I must have gotten as many as 5 or 6 calls per day at times, and it was always people badgering me to donate money or to purchase a product I didn't need. It's much easier not to deal with them at all because it's difficult for me to be rude to people when they call. Not every has the convenience of special kinds of answering devices and blocking machines; some of us have to answer the phone because we never know who it may be.

This law is so important to Indiana and I can't imagine why more people would not be opposed to it being changed or revoked! It's one of the best things to happen to this state in a long time.

Please don't take our privacy away.

Thank you.
